200,000 visitors with plenty of money and plenty of opportunity to get rid of it, and well, what more could Atlantic City ask for its Fourth of July celebration?

Amusement operators just couldn't resist the temptation. Sublimely disdainful of the warnings of the self-constituted curbstone censors, they lifted the bars and let the throng enjoy itself to the limit of its purse strings.

Frank Schwartz, of Buffalo, and Anthony Carsinitia, of 168 Eagle Street, Brooklyn, are back at the House of Refuge, Randall's Island, after their attempt to escape last night.

The two men ran from the engine room to a motor boat moored opposite 120th Street. They jumped into it, but, breaking the engine as they started away, they dived into the water and swam to Manhattan, pursued by keepers in rowboats, men from Harbor B and two detectives from the Third Branch Bureau. They explored the sewer of 118th Street as far as First Avenue, where they were driven back by the gases. FOR CONFESSION Prisoner Has Prepared Denial of Rose Testimony and 'Harlem Conference.'

Mr. Manton waited in New York that morning for word from Mr. Cockran of Becker's attitude, so that a bargain might be made with Governor Whitman. A mix-up occurred in the plan to telephone this information, so Mr. Manton, waiting until the morning was well advanced, decided to go on to Albany without knowing whether Becker was willing to talk. But before Mr. Manton went to the State Capitol Mr. Cockran got into communication with him and, with the fact of Becker's agreement, Mr. Manton made his first plea to Mr. Whitman.

Though at that time Becker had not turned over any names to Mr. Manton, either personally or through Mr. Cockran, Mr. Manton was enabled by his either personally or through Mr. Cockran, Mr. Manton was enabled by his families occupying the tenements above.
